CLEVELAND

Q&A: Leah Lou

Emerging young artist set to release first album next year

By Katie Stevenson

Leah Lou is relatively new to the Cleveland music scene. She was recently signed to Reverse Image Unlimited and is working on an album that should be released in early 2010.

You perform all over Cleveland. Where is your favorite spot to perform?

I don't know. I really like the Grog Shop. I only played there once, back in March, but their stage is so cool and you feel like you are on a real stage. That was my favorite show I played. I played there with the Promise Hero and a couple other bands from Texas. It was really fun.

You were recently signed to the record label, Reverse Image Unlimited; Can fans expect a CD out soon?

I think it's going to be 2010, but we are working on a song right now to give fans a little taste.

You and Adam Heart are performing at many of the same events this summer. Have you ever thought about collaborating on a song?

I would love to. We have talked about covering a Velvet Underground song. That would be really cool. Maybe on the upcoming album.

What is your favorite thing about Cleveland?

I moved to Dayton for awhile and I guess I never really appreciated it. Now I come back to it and all this is happening and I am like "wow, this place is awesome!" It was kinda like one of those things where you don't realize what you have until you are missing it. I just love it. It's my home.

What is your favorite bar or restaurant to visit while in town?

Dave's Cosmic Subs.
